IMPACT OF PRIMARY CARE

Having more primary care physicians in a community associated with less use of acute and surgical care, according to a national study of health care utilization. Extrapolating from those data, researchers say a 15% increase in primary care doctors in a given metropolitan area would:

- Cut emergency department visits by 10.9%
- Cut the number of surgeries by 7.2%.
- Cut inpatient admissions by 5.5%.
- Cut outpatient visits by 5.0%.
